The global coalition against corruption

What do we really know about them?

Alex Johnson · Thursday, November 5th, 2015

On the first anniversary of the LuxLeaks scandal, Transparency International EU launches its new animated video on corporate tax transparency “What do we know about them?” as part of its campaign in favour of EU legislation on country-by-country reporting (CBCR).

The structures and activities of many multinational corporations are highly opaque. Not knowing where corporations are, what they do and how they contribute to the societies they operate in may give rise to corruption risks. Citizens have the right to hold companies accountable for the impact they have on their communities.
